ANNA MILNOR:

The young lady who was not punctual.

BY T. S. ARTHUR.

'I will call for you at eight o'clock, precisely,' said a young man, as he stood at the door of a house in Spruce street, with the hand of a gentle girl in his. He had taken it as he said 'good bye,' and held it longer than usual.

'Very well, I shall be all ready,' returned the maiden.

'The cars start at a quarter past eight, precisely. We must not leave here a minute later than eight o'clock.'

'Not if we expect to join the private party at —'s Grove.'

'Good night, Anna.'

'Good night.'

As the maiden responded to her lover's good night, her hand, that lay in his, was gently pressed. That pressure sent a thrill of joy to her heart. Henry Alton had not yet declared his love for Anna Milnor, but little tokens of its existence were not wanting. Anna had few doubts or fears on this subject. She felt for him a deep tenderness, and questioned not the fact of its return.

On the next morning, Alton was at the house precisely as the clock struck eight. He asked for Anna. The servant went up stairs, and returned, saying that she would be ready in a moment. One, two, three, four, five minutes passed, and she did not appear. The young man, who was thoroughly punctual in his habit, became impatient. The cars left the depot at a quarter past eight o'clock precisely, and it would take at least five minutes to walk there.

It was seven minutes past eight, when Anna at length made her appearance.

'I am really sorry to have kept you waiting, Mr. Alton,' she said. 'But I couldn't help it. We have plenty of time to get to the cars, I hope.'

'As much as the bargain, returned the young man. 'It is now seven minutes past eight.'

'Oh! I have forgotten my parasol. I will get it in a moment.' And away sprang Anna. In about a minute her little feet were heard pattering down stairs.

'I am all ready now,' she said, when half way down. 'No! I declare I've dropped one of my gloves in the chamber.'

Very punctual men are usually impatient of delay.

'Too bad!' muttered Alton. 'We shall be left as sure as the world. Why will people be so thoughtless!'

Just at ten minutes past eight o'clock they left the house. To reach the depot in time would require rapid walking. Of course Mr. Alton would have to appear in a hurry in the street with a young lady by his side, a thing that annoyed him excessively. But there was no alternative. They proceeded at a quick step, in silence. The bell was ringing as they entered the car-yard.

'One moment driver,' said Alton, hurriedly, as he passed that individual, who was just in the act of speaking to the horses.

'Be quick, then,' returned the driver, impatiently, muttering something in addition about certain kind of people always coming at the last minute, which Alton only half heard.

The excitement and hurry of the two young people caused several thoughtless persons a good deal of merriment, which was rather loudly expressed Alton's cheek burned, and his lip quivered, when he seated himself, with Anna, on the sunny side of the car. The moment he set his foot on the platform, the cars commenced moving.

'Like to been left, Alton. Why, what in the world made you so late?' said a young man, one of the pleasure party that was going out on a kind of picnic to — Grove. 'We've all been here for at least ten minutes.'

'It was all my fault,' spoke up Anna, whose face was glowing from excitement and rapid walking. 'I had no idea the morning was passing away so swiftly. I might have been ready in good time enough, but didn't think eight o'clock came so soon.'

Alton said nothing. He was worried, and didn't care to let his tone of voice reflect his true feelings.

In a little while they were gliding rapidly away from the crowded city. The puffing locomotive was soon substituted for horses. Half an hour more, and the gay party, consisting of about forty young ladies and gentlemen, left the cars, and proceeded to a fine grove, about a quarter of a mile from the track of the railroad, where they proposed to spend the day.

Pleasant company and a pleasant ride dispelled from the mind of Alton the effect produced by Anna Milnor's want of punctuality. The excitement attendant upon starting had given an unusual brightness to her countenance, and quickened her flow of spirits. She was the life of the company. Every time the young men's eye rested upon her through the day, it was in admiration; and every time her tones reached his ear, they came with sweeter music than before.

'She is indeed, a lovely creature!' he more than once said to himself. The impression made by the unpleasant occurrence of the morning had nearly worn off, so charmed was he with all that Anna said and did through the day.

Time wore on, and the sun ranged low in the horizon. The cars were to pass at about half past six o'clock, when the party must be at the stopping place, or have the pleasure of walking home, a distance of nearly ten miles. About half past five notice was given, by some of the more thoughtful ones, that it was time to be making preparations for leaving the ground.

'Oh, it's plenty of time yet,' said some. 'It's only a little step over to the railroad.'

'But it will take at least half an hour to make all our arrangements for getting away,' was replied. 'Better be an hour too soon than a minute too late for the cars.'

'So say I,' chimed in Alton and some others, who took upon themselves the task of getting every thing, as fast as they could, in readiness to leave the ground.

'There's plenty of time,' said Anna Milnor, gaily, to Alton. 'Come, you must be my partner in this coalition.'

'I shouldn't like to walk ten miles to-night,' was his reply.

'Nor I. But there's time enough. — We can walk to the railroad in ten minutes.'

Alton could not refuse Anna's request, and so he joined, though reluctantly, the coalition. Time sped quickly on. When the music ceased, it was six o'clock.

All was now hurry and bustle among the greater portion of the company. But Anna still insisted that there was plenty of time, and actually induced a small number to commence another coalition. — Several remonstrated, and urged the necessity of immediate departure. But they were only laughed at for their impatience. Alton bit his lip with vexation at such thoughtlessness. He saw that Anna was the ruling spirit in this opposition to the majority to be at the stopping place of the cars in good time; and this worried him. It brought too vividly before his mind the incidents of the morning.

At last, even she felt that the time had come for making a speedy departure. — The little group that had been seemingly governed by her, separated, and commenced hasty preparations for leaving the spot. This took longer than they expected. Last of all to get away was Anna Milnor. By the time she left, some had reached the track of the railroad.

'There! as I live,' she exclaimed, after she had started with Alton, and had gone a couple of hundred of yards, 'I have lost my bracelet.'

As she said this, she turned and ran back at full speed. Alton called after her that they would certainly be left behind the cars. But she did not heed him. His only alternative was to run back, also and help her search for the bracelet.

'I've got it!' she cried in a moment after reaching the ground, and then came bounding back to meet her vexed and excited lover.

'We shall certainly be left behind,' he said.

'Come, run, then quick,' Anna returned and sprang away like a young fawn. — There was not a single member of the party in sight. All had hastened on to the stopping place of the cars, the most indifferent now feeling alarm lest they should be too late.

'It's nearly half-past six,' Alton remarked, glancing at his watch, as he came up to the side of the hurrying maiden.

'We'll soon be there, was her encouraging reply.

'There's not a moment to spare. — Heh! — the engine bell, as sure as I'm alive! We are too late.'

Perhaps not. Some of the party are there, and the conductor will certainly wait for us.'

The rest of the distance was traversed with swift feet, and in silence. Fortunately, they reached the stopping place just in time to get into the cars, but excited, overheated, and panting from exertion.

'Just saved your distance,' said the conductor, smiling.

'Myshaw! where is it?' exclaimed one of the ladies of the party, looking around her in alarm, soon after the cars were in motion.

'I don't know. Have you lost it?' asked a companion.

It was on my arm when we started. — But I was so afraid of being left behind that I didn't notice where or when I dropped it.'

Quietly seated in the cars, all had leisure now to think whether they had lost or left any thing behind. It was soon discovered that one was short a handkerchief, another a bag, a third a collar, a fourth a bracelet, and so on. But for these losses, there was no remedy. Every moment the swift speeding engine was bearing them farther and farther away from the spot where they had spent the day so pleasantly.

'Well,' remarked Alton, in a half laughing, half serious voice 'I hope this will be a lesson on punctuality for all of us. If we had quietly made our arrangements for leaving the ground an hour ago there would have been none of these losses to regret. We should have been at the railroad track at least half an hour before the cars came along, so that there would have been time enough to have returned for any thing then missed.'

'You needn't say any thing,' spoke up one. 'You were the last to reach the cars both coming and going. A lecturer on punctuality should be punctual himself.'

This was said jestingly. But it touched Alton in a tender spot.

'No — no — it's not fair to blame him,' Anna spoke up. 'It was all my fault.'

'I wish it hadn't been,' was Alton's mental reply.

When he retired to bed that night, the young man did not feel happy. His mind was disturbed. Why? He knew of only one cause. Anna Milnor's conduct had not pleased him. There was a defect in her character, with which, let it exist where it would, he had no kind of patience. It was so easy to be punctual, and so wrong not to be particular on this head, that he could find no excuse for it, even in the girl he loved.

It was a week before Alton could feel just in the frame of mind to visit Anna Milnor. Five minutes passed in her presence was sufficient to dispel all unpleasant impressions that her conduct had produced. There was a charm in her person, mind and manners that thoroughly captivated him. He was again a constant visitor.

As for Anna she waited only a declaration from her lover. Her heart was fully his. But he was not quite ready to make that declaration. Alton had a cool head as well as a warm heart. He was orderly in his habits, and regulated his conduct in life upon fixed principle. In choosing a wife, he would not permit himself to be governed, entirely by his feelings. He saw that Anna had defects of character — and one defect that, in his estimation, would have a very important bearing upon his future happiness. Before advancing a step farther, he determined to see how deeply seated this defect lay, and whether there was any hope of its being corrected.

'I will call for you on next Sunday morning,' he said to her one day, and walk with you to church.'

'I shall be very happy to have your company,' was her pleased reply.

'I will now see,' he said to himself, 'how deeply seated lies this want of punctuality. — Surely, she will regard the orderly observance of external worship too highly to permit herself to be a moment too late. Anna Milnor could not be guilty of disturbing a worshiping assembly by entering church after the services have begun.'

Half past ten was the hour for services to commence.

'Do, Anna,' said Mrs. Milnor, as the family arose from the breakfast-table on the next Sabbath morning, 'try and get ready in time to go with your father and myself to church. I am really tired at your want of punctuality in this manner.'

'O, never fear,' returned the daughter. 'I shall be ready. There is plenty of time.'

'So you always say. Go and begin to dress now.'

'Dress now? Why it's only eight o'clock. I can get ready in half an hour, an hour, at farthest. You won't start before ten.'

Saying this Anna took up her little brother in her arms and commenced sporting with him. An hour after, Mrs. Milnor heard her voice in the parlor.

'Anna dear, do begin to dress for church,' she called down to her.

'It's only nine o'clock, mother. There is plenty of time. I'll be ready as soon as you are.'

'I declare! it's half past nine o'clock, and that thoughtless girl hasn't gone up to her chamber yet,' the mother said as she heard the clock strike the half hour.

'Anna! — do go up and dress yourself. — I am out of patience with you.'

'I'll be ready now before you will,' the daughter said, as she bounded up stairs. A new dress had come home on the evening before. It was to be worn that day. But as she had not yet tried it on, she felt a desire to do so, and ascertain its fit. — There was plenty of time to dress for church. So she tried on the dress. — There was some defect about it. Certain folds somewhere, did not lie just to her taste. These were adjusted and readjusted over and over again. But they were inextricable. While thus engaged, she was aroused by the voice of her mother. "Anna, come, it is just ten, and we are all ready to start."

"Don't wait for me, mother. I will be along in a little while. Mr. Alton is going to call for me," returned the daughter, startled to find it was so late, and hurriedly taking off the new dress.

In about ten minutes afterwards, Mr. Alton rang the bell.

"Tell him that I will be along in a few moments," was sent down by the servant, who brought her word of his arrival.

Five, ten, fifteen minutes passed, but the young lady had not yet appeared.

"I am really grieved," murmured the young man to himself. "It seems hardly possible that any one can be so thoughtless. I met her father and mother some distance on their way to church as I came along."

Just then Anna came hurrying down stairs. She lacked but four minutes of church time; and the walk was one of full ten minutes.

"I'm sorry to have kept you waiting," Anna said. "But really, I had no idea that it was so late. I scarcely notice the flight of time."

"We shall be late," was Alton's only reply to this.

"I know we will. But we must walk fast. Oh! I have lost my handkerchief."

She glided up stairs, and did not come down for two or three minutes. They seemed as long as a period of ten minutes to the mind of Alton.

When the young couple entered the church, the minister was reading a portion of the service. All was silence profound and deep attention. Their coming in evidently disturbed the congregation. This was felt acutely by Alton, who never enjoyed public worship so little in his life.

After all was over, he returned with Anna to her home. But he said little on the way. He could not. His mind was too much disturbed. His abstraction of manner was so marked that even Anna could not help noticing it. She never remembered to have seen him so dull.

At the door of her father's house he bowed formally, and retired.

"How could you do so, Anna?" her mother said, as soon as she had entered the house.

"Do what, mother?"

"Come so late to church, after all I said to you this morning. And worse than all, to keep Mr. Alton waiting for you until after service had commenced. It was plain that he was greatly annoyed."

"I didn't see that he was, Anna returned, with a slight expression of surprise. But she now remembered that he said very little while going or coming. It might be that her mother's suggestion was too near the truth. Anna was not happy during the rest of the day.

"It's no use of disguising the fact," Alton said to himself, as he walked slowly homeward. "She will not suit me. I should be worried out of my life by her want of punctuality. Three times she has already subjected me to annoyance and mortification. These have worried me enough. How would it be if I were subjected to such things every day of my life? It would kill me outright. No—no! Anna Milnor!—you are a sweet fascinating creature. I love you more than I dare confess to myself. But I cannot make you my wife. That would be risking too much."

Thus reason urged. But feeling was not so easily subdued. It pleaded long for the charming girl—but it pleaded in vain. Alton was a young man of decided character. He never permitted himself to take a step that his judgement clearly condemned.

"I haven't seen you with Anna Milnor, lately," said a friend to him a few months afterwards.

"No."

"How is that?"

"Why did you ask the question?"

"You used to be very particular in your attention in that quarter."

"Perhaps I was. But I am not now."

"She is a lovely girl."

"That she is, truly."

"Just the one for you."

"No."

"I think she is."

"While I the party most interested, think otherwise."

"What is your objection?"

"She comes late to church."

"What?"

"She is not punctual."

"You are joking."

"No. Don't you remember the picnic?"

"Yes. And how you and she were late both in going and returning."

"All her fault. I don't want a wife who has not a regard for punctuality. It would annoy me to death."

"But, surely, that is not your only objection."

"I have no other."

"You are foolish."

"Perhaps not. But I can't help it. My wife must be punctual, and no mistake." Alton showed himself to be in earnest. Much as it cost him, he steadily resisted the inclination that was constantly urging him to renew his attentions to Anna Milnor. As for the young lady, she was unhappy for several months. Then she was consoled by the attentions of a new and less fastidious lover. She paid as little regard to punctuality as ever, but this was only a defect of minor importance in the eyes of the young man who had made up his mind to offer her his hand.

Alton was invited to her wedding about a year after the date of his unpleasant picnic adventure. A large and brilliant party were assembled to witness the nuptials, that were to take place at eight o'clock precisely. At eight, all the company were waiting, with the minister, the descent of the bridal party. But time passed on, and many began to feel impatient. Mr. Milnor, the father of Anna, came into the parlor frequently, and then went out, evidently worried at the delay, the cause of which Alton shrewdly guessed to lie in the fact that the bride was not yet ready.

"I believe the girl will be too late for death," he heard the old gentleman say in a fretful undertone to some one in the passage, close to the door, near by which he was sitting.

"Thank Heaven for my escape!" murmured Alton to himself, at the party came in about half past nine, after having kept the company waiting for an hour and a half. "Too late on her wedding night! She would have killed me!"

If this shoe should happen to pinch any lady, whether married or single, we beg of her not to think for a moment that it was made for her foot.

PURCHASING BUTTER.—"Is your butter good?" said I to the farmer.

"Good! my wife has made butter these twenty years, and I should think she ought to know how to make good butter by this time."

He was evidently offended.

"Well, let us examine it." The cover was taken off the tub, the clean white cloth, (which had been wet with brine,) rolled up, and the yellow treasure revealed. It certainly did look good.

"It tastes sweet; but how very salt it is."

"We always make our butter salt, to have it keep at this season."

"Let us see if the buttermilk is as well worked out as the salt is in."

Some of the lumps were then pressed down with the ladle.

"Now, my friend," said I, "if your wife has made butter these twenty years, she does not know how to make good butter; for no butter can be good until all the buttermilk is worked out. It is done you need not, salt it so bad to have it keep well in any place. A very little more care and labor would have made this excellent butter; but lacking that little, it is only a second quality—as you shall acknowledge when I show you a sample of good butter."

We went in, and took up a roll from a firkin of first rate butter. It was smooth, clear, and handsome; the hand of woman had not been on it from the time it left the churn until now; all the work had been done with a ladle.

"If you will get one drop of buttermilk from that butter, you shall have the whole free."

"Now, taste this, and taste your own, and say, honestly, if you would not give a higher price for this than your own. Look at it—see how clear and transparent these minute globules are, and how intimately they are blended with the whole mass. Until these all disappear, the butter will not keep long when they are ever so lightly colored by the milk."

The farmer simply remarked, that there was a difference in the butter, and left to find a less critical or more ready customer.

It is strange, that when every body loves good butter, and is willing to pay for it, our farmers' wives and daughters do not take pains to make a better article. It is the women's fault that we have poor butter generally, and we must hold them responsible. It is perfectly easy to make good butter. The only requisite is, care. Good butter will always command a good price in the dullest market; while poor butter is a drug at any price.

When any of my lady readers make butter again, just let them imagine that I am to have a nice bit of bread and butter with them, and that I shall detect the least particle of milk; and am not fond of too much salt.—New Gent's Farmer.

From Texas.—We are indebted to a gentleman who arrived in this city yesterday, overland from Galveston, for some items of intelligence, and a Houston paper of the 14th ult. Anson Jones was thought to have been elected to the presidency, though the returns were not complete. It was understood that Commodore Moore was fully acquitted. A public dinner was given to him by the citizens of Houston, without distinction of party, on the evening of the 12th ult. Among the toasts drank on the occasion were several in honor of the late Commander Lothrop. The President of the United States was complimented in the following sentiment:—"John Tyler—The purest and firmest of statesmen; the unwavering friend of Texas."

The difficulties in Shelby county, which at one time threatened to involve eastern Texas in a civil war, have happily been quelled; the troops which were marched thither were disbanded without finding it necessary to fire a gun. Several persons belonging to each party came voluntarily forward and entered into bonds to keep the peace, and their comrades quietly dispersed.

Lightning and Fire.—We learn that the barn of B. Newcomb 2d, in Newburg, was struck by lightning this morning, and set on fire, and was entirely consumed, together with a considerable quantity of hay and grain, and two swine. The lightning and heavy thunder which proceeded the rain this morning, are very unusual in this latitude at this season of the year.—Danvers Mercury, 8th inst.

Excitement in Gas.—Five men stabbed. At the exhibition of the laughing gas, by professor Elliotson, at Washington Hall, last evening, a sailor, under the effects of the exhilaration, cut the rope with which he was confined, rushed among the spectators, and seizing another sailor, gave him several severe and dangerous wounds with a jack-knife. The wounded man was taken across the street, and upon examination by physicians, it was found that a deep wound was inflicted under the shoulder, and another in the back, near the vertebra. The sailors were unknown to each other. The wounds are not considered mortal.

Another account states that five persons were stabbed and severely injured. Among other, Mr. T. Bolcher Kay, of the Gymnasium, was stabbed in the ribs.

English duties on American Wheat.—At the last dates, by the Coledale, wheat was selling for a about 45s sterling, the quarter. In consequence of this low price, in conformity with law, the rate of duty on the importation of foreign wheat had been raised to 50s per quarter—or 2s 6d sterling (equal to fifty-six cents) per bushel.

FROM TEXAS.—The Red River Republican of Sept. 21st, has been informed that Anson Jones beat Gen. Burleson, for President of Texas, in the part of the country about Nacogdoches, by a vote of nearly 8 to 1.

LONDON POLICE.—Police regulation has been carried almost to perfection in Europe. We never hear of a riot in Vienna or in the Russian capital. Nor often in Paris, unless it is excited to the dignity of a revolution. London has long enjoyed perfect tranquillity. If there were no other cause to make the name of Sir Robert Peel memorable, the great blessing which he has bestowed upon his country, in carrying through the system of the new Police, would of itself entitle him to a high place among the benefactors of mankind. In London, the police is a civic array, in numbers and discipline worthy of the name. Without any of the insignia of military show, but distinguishable by a known and conspicuous badge, the police is to be found at every turning. With more than the eyes of Argus, or the arms of Briareus, untiring in vigilance, and irresistible in power, omnipresent, ever ready to detect and suppress the beginnings of evil. It is eminently a humane system. It is preventive and conciliatory. It seeks to soothe and reclaim, by the most persuasive and gentle influences, instead of irritating by tyranny and harshness, the misery which, in a place like London, must be working at the heart strings of so many of its thousands of unfortunate. But under this exhibition of forbearing gentleness, there watches almost irresistible power, the power of law, of numbers, of union, of systematic and scientific organization. When the gentler remedies have failed, this power is called into instant and efficient action. There is no force which the dangerous classes can command, that would resist it for a moment. The consequence is, the streets of London are safe and peaceful. The defenceless have always a protector within the call of their voices. The bewildered wanderer has but to ask, and find his direction. The child who has lost its protector, or the anxious parent who has lost his child in the crowd, is each almost certain of finding the other at their common home. The robber, the thief, the ruffian, shrink into darkness. A riot in London would, we suppose, be impossible. The streets of London are more safe for the defenceless and the weak, than are those of most American towns of any considerable magnitude.

NEW TRAFFIC WITH AFRICA.—Several vessels have left Liverpool for the Western coast of Africa, with sealed instructions, to be opened in a certain latitude; and each carrying an experienced practical chemist, furnished with tests for ascertaining the real qualities and composition of ores and salts. The destination of these vessels, probably the pioneers of a new traffic, is understood to lie between the 20th and 30th degree of latitude on the Western coast; and there, the discovery of certain suspected veins of copper, lead, iron or gold, stated to exist about 40 miles from the sea coast, and in a rich and fertile country.

Fire in Springfield.—There was a very destructive fire in Springfield, (Mass.) on Sunday morning. It commenced at about 1 o'clock. The following particulars are from the Springfield Gazette:—

It originated in the building owned by Mr. Joshua Frost, and occupied as a saddle and harness shop by Mr. E. T. Amadon, in Sandford street, and before it was subdued, destroyed the whole adjoining mass of wooden buildings extended west to Main street, hence south to the store of Reynolds & Morris; and north to the brick building of Mr. Elijah Blake, including likewise a brick building on Sanford street, east of the one in which the fire originated. In all, five large buildings were destroyed, and considerable damage done to the two adjoining blocks of Elijah Blake.

The entire loss of property probably will not fall short of $26,000, upon which there is about $17,000 or $18,000 insurance. The deficit, we regret to say, falls chiefly upon those who are least able to sustain the loss.

Mrs. Child, in a letter to the Boston Courier, says.—"The New York ladies look like walking rainbows, and the shop windows of Broadway and Canal street are as gay and warmly attired as the wardrobe of an eastern princess." The same writer remarks that "society at the present time is obviously an orchestra without a leader, where each man's ambition is to make his own part most prominent, without any reference to the whole."

From Rio Janeiro.—Capt. Tyler, in the bark H. W. Tyler, arrived at New York from Rio Janeiro, and informs that he left in port on the 1st Sept. U. S. ship Constitution, Com. Percival. The U. S. frigate Congress arrived 30th from a cruise; all well. The U. S. ship Raritan sailed for the River of Plate on the 25th August. The Brazilians were actively fitting out all their vessels of war; it was supposed they intended to blockade Montevideo, and prevent the Buenos Ayreans from taking that place. The Sardinian frigate Eurydice sailed three days previous on a cruise. In port were three British frigates, one the America; also a Russian steam frigate.

Later from Havana.—The Savannah Republican favored us with a ship dated 8th inst., announcing an arrival at that port with advices from Havana to 25th ult. No news of interest.

Militeries Awaiting the Grand Finale. The Bay State Democrat of October 10th says:—"The Tabernacle at this moment (12 o'clock) is crowded with men, women and children, presenting a singular scene of religious infatuation. As much as the Militeries may have been charged with insincerity, we cannot doubt, after looking upon the crowd now assembled in the Tabernacle, and listened to their prayers, exhortations and hallelujahs, coming, as they appear to, from their very souls, we say we doubt their sincerity as little as we do their most singular infatuation. They have fixed upon 4 o'clock, this afternoon, for the 'Coming of Christ.' The world is to end this day at 4 o'clock, they most firmly believe—and they are preparing their souls and bodies for that great event, and for taking their final leave of terra firma, in their great ascension. Some of their exhortations, though honest, partake a little of the ludicrous, and provoke a smile from both saint and sinner."

The Meredith Bridge (N. H.) Gazette gives several instances of respectable men, who have made complete arrangements for the coming of the bridegroom and who expect to meet the midnight cry on the 22d October:—"Mr. Morgan, of Meredith, professes to be full in the faith. He is a worthy farmer, and many amusing instances are related of him, exhibiting the struggle which is going on in his mind between duty and interest. It is said of him that he rebuffs interest on his money with the same exactness he ever did, and that he holds it to be his duty to dispose of all his property, which he offers at sharper's price. It is said that up to this time his crops, except grain, are not harvested; but he does not allow his brethren to feed upon them, and it is not unlikely that he will take them by and by, for fear they will be injured, if not by fire, by frost. One thing, though, ought to be mentioned and it will do doubt furnish Mr. Morgan great consolation hereafter, and stand as a perpetual memento of his sincerity—he has given a poor townsman a cow! If he does not go up, though, some say he is to have the cow back in the spring. If so he will lose the advantage of this argument."

Fire and Loss of Life in Philadelphia. The Philadelphia Gaz. of Tuesday evening states that on Monday night, between 11 and 12 o'clock, a fire broke out in the stable of George Emery, corner of Rawle and School streets, which was destroyed, with a quantity of feed, gears, &c. Several houses in the neighborhood were considerably injured, and the furniture of the families damaged and destroyed. It was evidently the work of an incendiary. The horses were all got out without harm. The most melancholy part of the affair is the death of a young man, named Peter Himer, who, after the fire was nearly extinguished, was found dead in the charred hay, &c. It is supposed that he had been asleep on the loft, and was unable to get out of make an alarm, in consequence of the dense smoke.

A sad accident occurred this (Wednesday) morning, at the depot of the Western Railroad, in this town, by the giving way of a portion of the staging using in erecting the roof of the immense Engine building, now going up there. A number of persons were precipitated 22 feet to the ground, by the accident, five of whom were more or less injured. One named McGregory, it was feared, had been fatally hurt, but his principal injury is ascertained to be but a simple fracture of the leg. No other bones were broken, but the other four were bruised and mangled externally, in different degrees.

Consequence of Political Excitement.—A German named John Henry Crager, was killed on Thursday night, in Baltimore, by a gang of fellows who beat him to death with bludgeons. They then paraded the city and beat others, one or two of whom were not expected to recover. On Friday, two boys—one ten and other twelve years of age—stripped and fought a pitched battle in Baltimore. The dispute was political!—the one being a Whig, and the other a Democrat!—The adult spectators encouraged the boys to fight.

THE CASE OF THE LOUISIANA NEGROES.—Judge Bronson, on Thursday, made a decree in the case of the two negroes taken with the pilot boat Lafayette, and who had been detained in custody of the marshal to afford them time to establish their claim to freedom. It will be remembered that six of the eight were sold on the 6th of August last under a former decree. They were all demanded by the Governor of Louisiana as fugitives from justice, under a charge of larceny. The Governor of Florida issued his warrant for their delivery; but before that had been received here, the six above referred to had been sold, and they are not yet apprehended. It being clearly proved that the two who pretended to be free are also slaves; these on Thursday were delivered up to the agent of the Executive of Louisiana, to be taken thither and tried, in conformity with the act of 1793. The decree requires that after they shall have been tried, and undergone the punishment imposed by the laws of Louisiana on the offence they are charged with, they shall be redelivered to the marshal of this district to abide the further order of the court in a claim for salvage.

End of the Third Mormon War.—A correspondent of the St. Louis Republic, writing from near Quincy, Illinois, under date of the 30th ult., gives the following account of the termination of Governor Ford's recent disgraceful campaign:—

The war is ended and the troops are en route for home. This day the Governor held a treaty with the individuals against whom writs had been issued for being engaged in the killing of the Smiths and after some considerable negotiation the matter was finally settled to the satisfaction of all concerned. Col. William and Thos. C. Sharpe, Esq., agreed to surrender if they could be taken to Quincy for their examination. This was agreed to on the part of the Governor. Further, they were to have an escort to protect them while in the custody of the officer. If sufficient evidence was adduced to warrant the judge to commit for trial, the prisoners were to give moderate bail for their appearance at court. If an indictment is then found, they are to have a continuance and a change of venue. This might all have been accomplished without calling out twenty-five hundred militia, if the Governor had taken the proper steps in the first instance.

The Trial of Capt. Newton. of the Missouri, before the Naval Court Martial at Washington, terminated on Thursday, on which day the Captain read his defence which had been prepared for him by his counsel, Philip Hamilton, Esq.—The Intelligence speaks of it as ingenious and forcible, and in many places touching and eloquent. Capt. Newton served with distinction in the action of the Hornet with the Peacock and the Penguin, as a Lieutenant, under Lawrence and Biddle.

Letters addressed to him by Sir George Sartorius, of the Malabar 74, and Sir Robert Wilson, Governor General of Gibraltar, were read to the Court, in which these distinguished men awarded this officer the highest commendation for his conduct during the conflagration of the Missouri.

The evidence discloses that Captain Newton was the last man to abandon the devoted ship, and then only when all hope was gone of saving her.

It is said that a new and very rich Gold Mine has been discovered on the lands of Col. Wm. Hancock, in the upper part of Moore county, N. C. The ore is said to be worth from 10 to 20 dollars a bushel, so far as it has been examined. It is embedded in a blue flint stone. One of the veins is twelve feet wide; but the richest vein is from 8 to 12 inches wide.

Latest from Gibraltar.—Capt. Thomas, of the brig Caroline, at Boston, reports that on the 5th September, a detachment of British soldiers made an unsuccessful attempt to raise the wreck of the steamship Missouri, and that another attempt was to be made by the crew of the frigate Warspite, which it was thought would prove successful.

The Prince de Joinville was at Cadix on the 5th of September, with his squadron, consisting of three ships of the line the frigate La Belle Poule, and several steamers. The inflexible and steamer Montezuma were at Gibraltar. The Prince de Joinville had issued orders the none of his officers or men should communicate with any of the British officer or men, except Vice Admiral Owen.

Capt. Thomas also reports that the crop of grapes throughout the whole of the neighborhood, had never been known to be so short, which was accounted for by the excessive hot season in August which burnt many vineyards. Prices of dry fruits and limes were expected to rise very high throughout the season.

TRUE BILLS.—The Grand Jury of Philadelphia have found true bills against John G. Wainwright, ex M. C., for riot during the Southward disturbances, and Lewis C. Levin, Member of Congress elect from the First District, for misdemeanor in exciting to treason and riot. He will be tried probably week after next.

The Utica Baptist Register says the Rev. Benjamin Hovey preached in the Broad street Baptist Chapel in that city on the afternoon of the last Sabbath (September). Mr. H. has attained a remarkable age of one hundred and years.

NAVAL.—U. S. frigates Raritan and Congress, last from Rio Janeiro, bound on a cruise, were passed (no date given) in lat. 24 39 S. lon. 40 15 W., by the Globe, at Philadelphia, from Rio Janeiro. The testimony in the case of Captain Newton, who lately commanded the steamship Missouri, burnt in Gibraltar Bay, before the Court Martial at Washington, closed on Monday, and the defence will be made on Thursday, at 2 o'clock. The Court will then take up the case of Mr. Farran, chief engineer of the Missouri, and afterwards that of Lt. West and Midshipman Cook. The Philadelphia North American says, at the close of Capt. Newton's trial, Captain Gwynn retires from the Court, and is ordered to take command of the frigate Potomac.

VERMONT ASYLUM FOR THE INSANE.—By

U. S. District Court.

The U. S. District Court, Judge Pitman presiding, commenced its Oct. session in his town on Tuesday last. On Wednesday the Grand Jury returned indictments against eight of the crew of the whaling rig Pocahontas of this port, viz:—Francis W. Cameron, Wm. G. Hobbs, Sharnock G. Hatch, Michael Pendegast, Wm. Rennols, Henry Parsons, John E. Clark and Henry Williams (black).—These persons were seamen who refused to do duty at sea; in consequence the voyage was broken up and the vessel returned to port.

The Jury found Cameron, Hobbs, Rennols, Parsons and Williams guilty on the 3 first counts in the indictment and recommended them to mercy.

Hatch, Pendegast and Clark, all minors were not tried, but pleaded guilty, after the verdict was rendered against the others.

The Grand Jury also found a true bill against Michael McDonald for an assault and battery on Stephen Malich, a seaman on board the Barque Barrington of Providence, of which McDonald was 2d mate.

The case of Thomas W. Emsly vs George Burdick for an assault and battery on board schr Warsaw in Cuba, was continued on motion of Mr Pearce, counsel for Libellant.

The other [civil] cases were continued by agreement.

The Court last evening passed sentence on the crew of the Pocahontas, as follows:—Cameron (the leader) was sentenced to 90 days imprisonment; Hobbs, Parsons, and Rennols 60 days do.; Williams 30 days do.; Hatch, Pendegast and Clarke 10 days do.

State Elections

NEW JERSEY.—The official returns from this State make the majority for Charles C. Stratton, the Whig candidate for Governor, 1433.

PENNSYLVANIA.—The Harrisburg (Democratic) Union has returns from all the counties in Pennsylvania, and makes the majority for Shunk 5360. The returns from 21 counties are official, but the rest are not, and the official account may vary the amount of the majority. The New York Tribune puts it at about 4500. The Whigs have carried both branches of the Legislature, the Senate by 4 majority, the House by 14 majority. The Whigs have elected eight members of Congress and the Democrats thirteen.

The Whigs will have a majority of 18 in the Legislature which will secure the election of a U. S. Senator in the place of Mr. Tappan (Dem.)

GEORGIA.—The election for eight members of Congress (for the first time chosen by Districts) took place on Monday the 7th inst. The results of the election is the choice of four Whigs viz:—Thomas B. King, Washington Poe, A. E. Stevens, Robert B. Tombs and probably of four Democrats viz:—John H. Lumpkin, Howell Cobb, H. H. Haralson, Seaborn Jones. The returns from 87 counties give a democratic majority of 2411. As there was no general ticket the popular vote would be more or less effected by local causes in each District.

In the York District, the votes are for Hayes, Dem. 4875, Seamon, Whig, 4078, Herrick, Dem. 2434, Smart, Abolitionist, 800 and others 223.

Daniel Kellogg, (D.)	20,930
W. R. Shafter, (Ab.)	5,918
Scattering,	34
Majority for Slade,	1,653

HOTELS.—The success of the Ocean House the last season, seems to have produced a sort of mania for increasing the accommodations in this place for the next year. In addition to the large Hotel which is now being built, by Mr Wm. T. Potter, at the head of Pelham street, the proprietors of the Ocean House have commenced enlarging their building, by an addition of 115 feet on the north side, making the whole front 227 feet on the street. The dining room is to be enlarged 50 feet on the east side, and additional buildings are to be erected in the rear, intended for Bar Room, Cook House, &c.

The Bellevue House is also to undergo great alterations; an addition of 90 feet is to be added to the east side three stories high, and various improvements are to be made in the other parts of the building.

The projected Hotel of Capt. Comstock, which we mentioned some weeks since, will probably be postponed to another year, owing to the difficulty of obtaining a suitable site.

NEAL'S SATURDAY GAZETTE.—We have received the first number of the Saturday Gazette and Ladies' Literary Museum, published weekly in Philadelphia, edited by Jos. C. Neal Esq., author of Charcoal Sketches, &c. &c.—The paper is of the largest size, and from the well known talents of the editor there can be no doubt of its success.

COLLEGE HONORS.—The degree of D. D. has been conferred by Marshall College, on the Rev. Henry A. Boardman, Pastor of the Tenth Presbyterian Church, in Philadelphia.

BRUTAL OUTRAGE.—Cato Brightman, a well known black, was committed to Jail in this place on Tuesday last, and after a preliminary examination, was fully committed to take his trial at the March term of the Supreme Court, for the crime of rape, on a white girl of only 12 years of age.

Immense Conflagration.—SIXTY THOUSAND DOLLARS BURNED.—The New Orleans Picayune states that notes to the amount of $60,000, counterfeit money, which were recovered from a man by the name of Vincent Clark, were burnt on the 2d by order of Judge Conhoge, of the Criminal Court. The counterfeiters were remarkably good, and were principally on the Bank of Mo. Bank of Ind. Bank of Louisville, Northern Bank of Kentucky, Lafayette Bank of Cincinnati, and the City Bank of New Orleans.

AWFUL EXPLOSION.—Three men scalded to death.—On Monday, between 1 and 2 o'clock, one of the boilers of the steam engine in the extensive rolling mill of Messrs. Lorenzo & Cuddy in Stigou, opposite this city, burst with a tremendous explosion, and scalded three men.

The engineer, Joseph Davis, besides being badly scalded, had his hand bruised by the brick and other rubbish which were scattered in all directions of the extensive building. The doctors say he cannot live but a few hours.

Jacob Forden, the fireman, had his head cut besides being badly scalded. It is feared that he will also die.

Jacob Botman, a laborer in the mill, was scalded, but not so severely as the other two. He had also both arms and his collar bone broken, and one eye severely cut by a brick. Several persons who were about the mill, or in the neighborhood of it, were struck with pieces of bricks, which flew in every direction—but no one, we believe, was severely injured.—Pittsburg Chron. Oct. 8.

LAMENTABLE.—A Mr. Chamberlain, of Goffstown, N. H. lost his life on Tuesday morning 8th inst., at Piscataquoque Village, under the following circumstances. He had come from home, with a load of wood, and after having drunk freely at one of the stores, endeavored to mount his cart, but losing his balance, he fell under the track of the wheel, causing the cattle to start. The wheel passed over his neck and killed him almost instantly. He has left a wife and family. He was about 40 years old.

Loss of a Factory by Fire.—The woolen factory of Gilson, Smith & Co., at Prudersville, Vt., was burned down on Saturday, the 28th ult. The contents of the two lower rooms of the building were mostly saved in a damaged state. Insured in Boston, $18,000 at the Manufacturers' Office and $4,000 at the Fireman's Office.

Conviction for Murder.—We learn from Worcester, that at the trial of Thos. Barrett, an Irishman, before the Supreme Court, now in session at that place, for the murder of Mrs. Houghton of Lunenburg, the jury returned a verdict of guilty, and the criminal has been sentenced to be hanged.

Brighton Market, Monday, Oct. 14th Reported for the Boston Daily Advertiser

At Market, 850 Beef Cattle, 150 Stores, 1700 Sheep and 3500 Swine.—The prices obtained last week were hardly sustained. We quote extra 4 75 a $5; first quality 4 25; second quality $4; third quality $2 75 a 3 75.

Stores.—Two year old $10 a $13; three year old from 15 to $19.

Sheep.—sales from 1 25 to 2 25.

Swine.—Lots to peddle from 3 1-2 to 4c, according to quality; large Barrow Shoats 4c. At retail from 4 to 5 1-2c.

POST FACTUM NULLUM CONSILIUM.—This is an old Roman adage, and applied with as much force to Peters' Cough Lozenges as any thing in the world can well do. "After the deed is done there is no need of consultation," is a fair translation, and as such should be regarded. When a cold is taken, fly to these lozenges; they will afford certain relief, and as such be most beneficial. But it is not to this remedy alone we would call public attention—Peters' Cathartic or Health Lozenges are in all complaints of the bowels, liver, &c., beyond praise; they destroy every thing which deranges the stomach and intestines, and should be in the possession of every family.—When the bowels are in disorder, the whole system must be attended to—at such times the Cathartic or Health Lozenges will be found superior to any other medicine.

POETRY.

THE GRAVE.

How sweet to sleep where all is peace,
Where sorrow cannot reach the breast,
Where all life's idle throbbings cease,
And pain is lulled to rest!—
Beneath o'er fortune's troubled wave,
To anchor in the silent grave!

That quiet land where, peril past,
The weary win a long repose,
Where the bruised spirit finds, at last,
A balm for all its woes,
And lowly grief and lordly pride
Lie down, like brothers, side by side!

The breath of slander cannot come
To break the calm that lingers there;
There is no dreaming in the tomb,
Nor waking to despair;
Unkindness cannot wound us more,
And all earth's bitterness is o'er.

There the maiden waits till her lover comes,
Where they never more may part;
There the stricken deer hath gained her home
With the arrow in her heart;
And Passion's pulse lies hushed and still,
Beyond the reach of the Tempter's skill.

The mother—she is gone to sleep,
With her babe upon her breast—
She has no weary watch to keep
Over her infant's rest;
His slumbers on her bosom fair
Shall never more be broken—there!

For me—for me, whom all have left,
—The lovely, and the dearly loved—
From whom the touch of time hath left
The hearts that time hath proved,
Whose guerdon was—and is—despair,
For all I bore, and all I bear;

Why should I linger idly on,
Amid the selfish and the cold,
A dreamer—when such dreams are gone
As those I nursed of old?
Why should the dead tree mock the spring,
A blighted and a withered thing?

How blest—how blest, that home to gain,
And slumber in that soothing sleep,
From which we never rise to pain,
Nor ever wake to weep!
To win my way from the tempest's roar,
And lay me down on the golden shore.

A Chronological Account of all material Occurrences from the first settlement of RHODE ISLAND.

1774.

At the Annual Election on the first Wednesday of May, the following persons were elected officers.

Joseph Wanton, Governor.

Darius Sessions, Deputy Governor.

Assistants.

John Collins, David Harris,
John Almy, John Congdon,
Wm. Richmond, Thomas Wickes,
Jonathan Randall, Peleg Barker,
John Sayles, William Potter,
Henry Ward, Secretary.
Henry Marchant, Attorney General.
Joseph Clarke, Treasurer.

This year was one of great political excitement.

The Boston Port Bill was passed by the British Parliament early in this year, and the Town of Boston was occupied by the British troops; this was in consequence of the destruction of the Tea.

A Census of the inhabitants of the Colony of Rhode Island was taken this year and the whole number was found to be 59,625 viz—54,435 Whites, 1482 Indians and 3761 Negroes.

The town of Newport contained 9209, and Providence 4321—This only included the persons actually in the place at the taking of the census, Seamen and others absent were not taken in the account.

This year the General Assembly passed an act for the gradual abolition of Slavery.

The entries at the Custom House in Newport for the months of June and July, were vessels from foreign voyages 64—Coasters 134—Whalemen 17; making an aggregate of 215 in the space of two months.

A town meeting was held in Newport in August, and a large committee appointed to receive donations for the poor of Boston, and the Deputies to the General Assembly were requested to use their influence to obtain a grant from the General Assembly for the same purpose.

The British armed vessels in the Harbor of Newport, in the month of August, took a quantity of provisions from two whaling vessels bound to the Falkland Islands.

The People of Rhode Island removed from Fort George in the Harbor of Newport about 40 pieces of Cannon and carried them to Providence.

On the 4th of September, Delegates from eleven of the Colonies met at Philadelphia and formed themselves into a Congress, and chose Peyton Randolph, President and Charles Thompson, Secretary. The Delegates from Rhode Island were Stephen Hopkins and Samuel Ward.

Christopher Gardner* a native of Newport, opened a Circus this year, in which he performed surprising feats of Horsemanship.

* Christopher Gardner, was the son of Henry Gardner who was the keeper of a Tavern at the head of Tanner street in Newport;
When the celebrated equestrian Bates, visited Newport, he put up at this house, and young Gardner, attached himself to his company and accompanied it to Boston, New York and other places, and such was his proficiency in horsemanship, that he was said to equal or exceed his master. On the return of Bates to Europe, Gardner formed a Circus Company on his own account, and performed in the principal towns, with great success. In the Revolutionary war he went with his company to the English West India Islands, where he remained until peace took place. In 1783 he landed in Florida with an intention of proceeding by land to Georgia, but unfortunately at this time the frontiers were invaded by a gang of horse-thieves, and a party of lawless settlers who called themselves Regulators were then out in pursuit; these last having fallen in with Gardner and his company, consisting of 5 men and 10 horses, they after a brief consultation among themselves, basely murdered the whole party, took their horses and other property and returned to the settlements.

Agricultural.

The Disease among Potatoes.

The disease among potatoes is a serious calamity. It has prevailed to some extent in every state where this vegetable is cultivated, and in some sections it has been almost universal, so that the amount of the crop in good condition will not equal the seed planted.
It has excited much attention, and well it may from the importance of this crop; and many have been the con-jectures as to its cause.

Some persons think it is owing to the drought, as it has been very dry in some places; others suppose a great degree of wet to be the cause, and as evidence they show that it has been most severe on wet lands. Some suppose that it has been caused by planting on old lands, as potatoes on new ground have escaped while those on old land have been destroyed. In some cases potatoes have succeeded well where the manure was spread, when in fields adjacent where the manure was put in the hill they have failed. Some farmers have planted potatoes that were frost bitten, as the saying is, and of course not in very good condition, and the product has been affected by this disease, while near by, good seed was used and with excellent success. In some cases the seed from late planting last year, which was of course more vigorous, has produced good crops, while under the same circumstances,
otherwise, seed from early planting, which of course became over ripe and mealy, has produced crops that have been injured by this disease. Some persons attribute the disease to a natural decline of varieties, from long propagation from the tubers, without renewing from the seed. Insects have been numbered among the conjectured causes.

Many other causes may be assigned and more or less evidence can be brought to support the different positions, but on taking a general view of the subject, we shall find that all these various causes only have a partial effect, or predispose the plant to the disease, so that it will be not only more readily, but more severely effected.—
All these causes have been operating for years without producing effects so disastrous, and we cannot suppose that they will all at once cause so serious an evil. Thus far the closest observers and most experienced cultivators, as well as men of science who have investigated the subject, have searched for the general cause, and it has eluded their most thorough investigations.—It is a mysterious agency, that none have been able to explain; and so it will remain, we apprehend, though we would not discourage the most elaborate examinations into the subject, as it is of high importance.

We believe that it is the same with this as with many other diseases among vegetables, and among the human race and animals. There is some unknown atmospherical influence that cannot be explained which operates sometimes to small extent, and at other times, or in other places, its influence is very extensive and general. Sometimes the influenza prevails almost universally, and with great severity and mortality on our section of the country, while in other places only a hundred or two miles off, and in some cases not more than 30 or 40, it may not be prevalent.
By and bye, some two or three months later, it may prevail some hundreds or a thousand miles off, and be less general in its effects, and far less severe.— Can any one explain the cause? It is the same with other diseases that are incident to man, and the same with other animals and with vegetables.

HAIR TONIC.

For the Growth, Preservation

N O matter how bald a person may be, a growth of hair will be produced, and as naturally too as herbage grows on the plain, or the lily in the valley. This Tonic is warranted to cleanse the hair from Dandruff, and every other accumulating substance. Is your hair dry and falling off?—The Tonic will moisten and fix it firmly in the head. Is your hair thin or your head bald?—The Tonic is warranted to satisfy the largest desires in thickening the hair in the first case and covering the Bald Head with natural hair, in the second.

It is composed of these remedial agents that restore the skin at once to a sound and healthy condition, when thus restored, you will soon discover on the head, a short soft and beautiful growth of young hair, gradually increasing in length, till it becomes like your other hair was before you began to lose it.
